What are Ingrown Toenails?

An ingrown toenail, also known as onychocryptosis, occurs when the corner or edge of a toenail digs into the surrounding skin. This can happen for various reasons, including:

Improper nail trimming: Cutting your nails too short or at an angle can encourage them to grow inwards.

Tight-fitting shoes: Shoes that squeeze your toes together can put pressure on the nail and cause it to become ingrown.

Trauma: Stubbing your toe or dropping something on it can damage the nail and make it more likely to grow inwards.

Genetics: Some people are simply more predisposed to getting ingrown toenails due to the shape of their nails or toes.

Symptoms of Ingrown Toenails

If you suspect you have an ingrown toenail, watch out for these telltale signs:

Pain: This is the most common symptom, typically a throbbing or pulsating pain around the affected toe.

Redness: The skin around the toenail will become red and inflamed.

Swelling: The toe may become swollen and tender.

Pus: In some cases, the area may become infected, leading to pus drainage.
