Why Tree Hazards Matter

Unmaintained trees can pose several risks, especially during storms or high winds. Dead branches, overgrown limbs, and trees with diseases or structural weaknesses can easily break or fall, causing damage to property, power lines, and even people. Preventive care is essential to avoid these scenarios.

Common Tree Hazards:

- Dead or decaying branches: These are prone to cracking off, especially during inclement weather.

- Leaning or unstable trees: Trees that lean or show signs of instability can eventually topple over.
- Overgrown limbs: Limbs that extend over roofs, driveways, or power lines can create safety issues.
- Pest infestation or disease: Diseased or pest-infested trees are more likely to deteriorate and lose their structural integrity.
